Training Objectives

The goal of the Third Country Training Program (TCTP) on “Strengthening Disability-Inclusive Disaster Risk Reduction (DIDRR)” in the ASEAN Region is to help people who work in disaster risk reduction, and organizations of/for people with disabilities improve their skills. The first course has both online and on-site training. Through lectures, site visits, and networking with other groups, participants are expected to gain practical knowledge and skills.

The primary objective of this first course is to equip participants with the essential tools and expertise to create a comprehensive disaster risk reduction handbook. The main goal of this first course is to give participants the skills and tools they need to make a complete handbook on reducing the risk of disasters. This handbook will serve as a guide for individuals with functional needs to survive disasters, regain independence, and maintain self-sufficiency. The subsequent courses aim to develop highly proficient trainers in disability inclusion and disaster risk reduction, drawing on the best practices and information from the handbook.

Ultimately, the TCTP seeks to ensure the safety and well-being of individuals with disabilities in all stages of disaster planning (Pre-During-Post), empowering them to lead secure and self-reliant lives in their local communities, even within times of crisis.

Expected Outcome

Participants can expect to acquire a comprehensive understanding of disability-inclusive disaster risk reduction, as well as practical tools and skills for implementing best practices in disaster planning, preparedness, and response. By the end of the course, they will gain the ability to create a comprehensive disaster risk reduction handbook to support individuals with functional needs to maintain their independence and self-sufficiency during emergencies. Participants will also have the opportunity to develop their networking skills and connect with other organizations involved in disaster risk reduction promoting collaboration and sharing of best practices across the ASEAN region. Ultimately, participants will be able to use their newly acquired knowledge and skills to empower individuals with disabilities and their families to live safely in their communities and actively participate in disaster risk reduction efforts, ensuring their well-being and self-reliance in times of crisis.

Executive summary

The Third Country Training Programme (TCTP) on Strengthening Disability Inclusive Disaster Risk Reduction (DIDRR) in the ASEAN Region was a comprehensive 14-day course that focused on empowering individuals with disabilities and their families to live safely and independently in their communities during disasters. The course aimed to develop the capacity of individuals in sectors related to disaster risk reduction, and organizations of/ for persons with disabilities.

The online component of the course covered the basic principles and knowledge of DIDRR. It ran from July 23 to 29, 2022, for seven days. Participants gained a comprehensive understanding of disability-inclusive disaster risk reduction and practical tools and skills for implementing best practices in disaster planning, preparedness, and response. They also had the opportunity to network with other organizations involved in disaster risk reduction and migration, promoting collaboration and sharing of best practices across the ASEAN region.

The onsite component of the course covered the basic principles on DIDRR, mapping the situation, and sharing good practices. It ran from February 5 to 11, 2023, for seven days. Participants had the opportunity to gain practical knowledge and skills through lectures, site visits, and networking with other organizations. The primary objective of this component of the course was to equip participants with the essential tools and expertise to create a comprehensive disaster risk reduction handbook in the subsequent sections. This handbook would serve as a guide for individuals with functional needs to survive disasters, regain independence, and maintain self-sufficiency and autonomy before, during and after disasters..

The TCTP on Strengthening Disability Inclusive Disaster Risk Reduction in the ASEAN Region was a success, empowering individuals with disabilities and their families to live safely and independently in their communities during disasters. Participants gained a comprehensive understanding of disability-inclusive disaster risk reduction and practical tools and skills for implementing best practices in disaster planning, preparedness, and response. They used their newly acquired knowledge and skills to create a comprehensive action plan for disaster risk reduction for individuals with functional needs for their respective countries.

The TCTP also promoted collaboration and sharing of best practices in disaster risk reduction from Japan and across the ASEAN region. It was an excellent opportunity for individuals in sectors related to disaster risk reduction, and organizations of/for persons with disabilities, to develop their capacity and become proficient trainers in disability inclusion and disaster risk reduction. The handbook will serve as a guide to develop a comprehensive disaster risk reduction plan, ensuring the safety and well-being of individuals with disabilities in all stages of disaster occurrence (Pre-During-Post).

In conclusion, the TCTP on Strengthening Disability Inclusive Disaster Risk Reduction in the ASEAN Region was an essential step in promoting disaster preparedness, increasing awareness, and involving individuals with disabilities in decision-making. It empowered them to lead secure and self-reliant lives in their local communities, even within times of crisis. The course was a success, and it is hoped that its impact will continue to be felt for years to come, promoting collaboration and sharing of best practices across the ASEAN region.

Key outcomes

In short, the key outcomes of the TCTP are:

Participants were equipped with the necessary tools and expertise to create a comprehensive disaster risk reduction handbook as well as become trainers of trainers in the subsequent courses.

This first course of this TCTP has become the first step in empowering individuals with disabilities and their families to safely live in their communities during disasters and actively participate in Disaster Risk Reduction within the ASEAN region and beyond.

Participants gained a comprehensive understanding of disability-inclusive disaster risk reduction, as well as practical tools and skills for implementing best practices in disaster planning, preparedness, and response.

The TCTP promoted collaboration and sharing of best practices across the ASEAN region, strengthening the overall disaster risk reduction efforts in the area.

The Third Country Training Program (TCTP) on Strengthening Disability-Inclusive Disaster Risk Reduction (DIDRR) in the ASEAN Region achieved several key outcomes. Participants who completed the training program were equipped with the necessary tools and expertise to create a comprehensive disaster risk reduction handbook and to become trainers in subsequent sections, to support individuals with functional needs during emergencies in perpetuity.

The training program was successful in empowering individuals with disabilities and their families to safely live in their communities during disasters and actively participate in Disaster Risk Reduction. By promoting disaster preparedness, increasing awareness, and involving them in decision-making, the TCTP addressed their needs and ensured they had the necessary resources and support to maintain safety and independence during emergencies.

Participants gained a comprehensive understanding of disability-inclusive disaster risk reduction, as well as practical tools and skills for implementing best practices in disaster planning, preparedness, and response. The TCTP was also successful in promoting collaboration and sharing of best practices across the ASEAN region, strengthening the overall disaster risk reduction efforts in the area.

The outcomes of the TCTP have contributed to building a more resilient and inclusive society, particularly in the ASEAN region. By ensuring the safety and well-being of individuals with disabilities in all stages of disaster planning (Pre-During-Post), the training program empowered them to lead secure and self-reliant lives in their local communities, even within times of crisis.
